IIDANNOUNCES 15TH ANNUAL INDUSTRY ROUNDTABLE
Work: Who, Where and How: The Intersection of Culture, Workplace and Social Media

This two-part discussion will focus on how the design community is using and accessing social media in the workplace, the way social media has changed the definition of ‘work’ and its potential to elevate a brand. The roundtable provides a valuable, hands-on opportunity for thought leaders to explore business enhancing topics such as the changing landscape of work and cultural climate; social media’s impact on brands and evolving use and access of most popular sites; and client dynamics in the new world of online transparency and access.

A published white paper will provide a follow-up review encompassing conversations and knowledge nuggets that culminate from the discussion and a useful resource for those researching social media. The white paper will be available in February, 2012.
The annual roundtable event works to strengthen the manufacturer/practitioner relationship by offering strategic perspectives on the changing business practice for all involved in the profession of Interior Design. The program has become an invaluable session for manufacturers and a quality opportunity for designers to dialogue with their partners in the built environment. Facilitating the synergy between the Interior Design and manufacturing communities is considered an essential role of IIDA in enhancing the future of design, and will be conducted by IIDA Executive Vice President and CEO, Cheryl S. Durst, Hon. FIIDA.

For more information or to participate in a future thought leadership session, contact IIDA Headquarters Senior Vice President, Dennis Krause, Hon. IIDA, at 561-637-7566. The 2010 Industry Roundtable White Paper can be found here, and the 2011 Industry Roundtable White Paper can be found here.
